Dear Sir/Madam

RE: Trade Advice Notice – Flutriafol in the Product Intake Combi Sapphire In-Furrow and Foliar Fungicide

1. About Grain Trade Australia

Grain Trade Australia (GTA) is the focal point for the commercial grains industry within Australia. It facilitates trade and works to provide an efficient, equitable and open trading environment by providing leadership, advocacy and commercial services to the Australian grain value chain.

GTA members are responsible for over 95% of all grain storage and freight movements made each year in Australia. Over 95% of the grain contracts executed in Australia each year refer to GTA grain standards and/or trade rules.

GTA members are drawn from all sectors of the grain value chain from production to domestic end users and exporters. GTA members are involved in grain trading activities, grain storage, grain for human consumption and stock feed milling. A list of all members is attached.

Within this context, GTA provides comment on the abovementioned Trade Advice Notice (TAN) regarding varying the registration of the product Intake Combi Sapphire In-Furrow and Foliar Fungicide for use on canola.

2. Concerns with the proposed variation on use in Canola

2.1 Export Market

As noted in the TAN, Australia is a significant exporter of canola grain, oil and meal to many markets throughout Asia, Europe and the Pacific. In supplying those markets, the Australian grain industry has a commitment to not only supply a quality product, but also to comply with relevant international and national regulations relating to chemical residues.

It is noted in the TAN “Crop Care are proposing to increase the in-furrow application rate in canola from 200 mL/ha (100 g ai/ha) to 400 mL/ha (200 g ai/ha) when mixed with granulated fertilizer or injected into the soil at the time of planting.

*The proposed use will require an increase in the flutriafol Rape seed MRL from 0.02 mg/kg to 0.07 mg/kg.

In residue trials reflecting the proposed use pattern, 5 of the 6 results for canola grain were between the LOD (0.005 mg/kg) and the LOQ (0.02 mg/kg) of the analytical method. The highest residue was 0.04 mg/kg.”

As outlined in the TAN the proposed use will lead to flutriafol residues on the harvested commodity. The residues cited resulting from the trial treatments in the TAN are of concern to the Australian grain industry based on the proposed MRL changes.

The concerns are summarised below for key Australian export markets of canola (and/or wheat and barley as appropriate), noting that the highest trial data at the proposed double rate treatment in canola seed was 0.04ppm:

China

- China has no MRL for canola and therefore a zero tolerance applies.
- While limited testing may have been done in the past, it has recently been highlighted that testing of shipments in China will increase in future.
- China has no MRL for barley and therefore a zero tolerance applies.
- China has a wheat MRL of 0.5ppm and is therefore of no concern.

European Union

- The proposed EU MRLs for canola, wheat or barley are not considered a concern.
- It is expected that the new MRLs will be set in the immediate future and before any proposed approval of the higher application rate for flutriafol is legislated.

Japan

- The wheat MRL is 0.5ppm, the barley MRL is 0.2ppm and canola MRL is under the oilseeds category at 0.2ppm.
- Based on the TAN trial data these MRLs are therefore of no concern.

Pakistan

- Pakistan has no MRL for canola and therefore a zero tolerance applies.

Saudi Arabia

- While no canola is traded to this market, wheat and barley is traded and the risk of cross-contamination exists.
- Saudi Arabia has a canola MRL of 0.01ppm.

South Korea

- No current trade in canola exists but is a potential market.
- Canola, barley and wheat to South Korea potentially default to an MRL of 0.01ppm and based on the TAN trial data is therefore of concern.

United Arab Emirates

- Under the default policy the EU MRL for canola of 0.2ppm applies and is therefore of no concern.
- Under the default policy the EU MRL for barley of 0.5ppm applies and is therefore of no concern.

Codex

- There is no Codex MRL for canola or barley. Several markets default to Codex. If there is no Codex MRL, a default of 0.01ppm or zero may apply.
- The Codex MRL for wheat is 0.15ppm and based on the TAN trial data is therefore of no concern.

In general therefore it could be assumed that doubling the application rate will potentially lead to a greater number of detectable levels of flutriafol on shipments and detection of flutriafol at levels higher than at present. This will increase the risk of cargo rejection in markets as listed above.

In addition, the potential for residues to arise in other commodities such as wheat and barley from cross-contamination of non-canola shipments will increase. While the industry implements measures to minimise this risk of contamination when handling these commodities through a common infrastructure, analysis of export shipments operating under these industry “risk mitigation strategies” indicates flutriafol residues above permitted MRLs is occurring. If the proposed double rate treatment is permitted this risk will increase in future in those markets where MRLs are a concern as listed above.

2.2 Domestic Market

The Australian domestic stockfeed market is a very large user of canola meal and canola seed. Canola oil is also used.

The above concerns with MRL violations or rejections on the export market do not extend to canola marketed on the Australian market, given the intended increase in MRL to 0.07mg/kg.

While the TAN contains commentary around beef and the consumption of 100% of canola trash, we note that the comment for poultry is that “The maximum livestock dietary burden for poultry is unchanged by this proposal”.

While the industry is not disputing this to be the case, the TAN does not provide the numerical justification for that statement. In fact, the TAN clearly states “Residues in animal commodities will not be discussed further”.

In reaching a final decision on this proposed change to the use of flutriafol, please ensure that the domestic uses of canola and products by the poultry industry are considered and the statements in the TAN are fully justified.

3. Control of Blackleg in Canola

It is noted in the TAN that “Treatment will reduce blackleg infection in both susceptible and tolerant canola varieties. Use the higher rate of application (400 mL/ha) when heavy blackleg infection pressure is expected and to reduce stem and crown infection later in the season, particularly on more susceptible varieties.”

The disease blackleg in canola is a significant quarantine risk to some markets of canola. The disease itself causes significant economic losses in Australia. For these reasons the industry in recent years has undertaken significant efforts in order to more effectively manage this disease in canola.

We are also aware that Crop Care has developed a Stewardship Program to assist growers to correctly apply the new formulation and meet requirements of their customers. While this endeavour is applauded, the outcomes are as yet uncertain.

The initiative by Crop Care Australasia Pty Ltd to vary the label and assist the industry and in particular the production sector to more effectively manage these issues is commended. However as there is a large export trade in canola, and other commodities that may inadvertently pick up residues from canola, these trade risks must be considered when varying a label registration.

4. Conclusion

The Australian grain industry prides itself on meeting customer and regulatory requirements and implements a range of measures to ensure exports are compliant. Based on the information provided in the TAN, the proposed variation to double the application rate on canola presents an unacceptable risk to that trade which at present cannot be mitigated by measures adopted by the Australian grain industry.

While this risk is significantly higher for canola, the risk is also present for wheat, barley and potentially other commodities not referred to in this submission.

The industry applauds the efforts and assistance of the chemical registrant to assist control of a disease such as blackleg in canola.

However, given the potential for residues to arise exceeding several key market MRLs for flutriafol, Grain Trade Australia opposes the proposed variation to the registration of Flutriafol on canola.

Thank you for your consideration of this response.
