RE: Potential new geographical indications

Dear Brendan,

Grain Trade Australia (GTA) welcomes the opportunity to provide comment on the potential changes to the Australian geographical indications (GI) right. Whilst generally supportive of Free Trade Agreements (FTA) where they add value GTA is not supportive of any alteration to the GI right as a trade off during the negotiation of the proposed European Union (EU) FTA as a change may possibly create unnecessary complexity and will not create any value for the grain industry.

1.0 Grain Trade Australia's Role

GTA is the focal point for the commercial grain industry within Australia. It facilitates trade and works to provide an efficient, equitable and open trading environment by providing leadership, advocacy, and commercial services to the Australian grain value chain. GTA is non-political, industry driven with a primary focus to ensure the efficient facilitation of commercial activities across the grain supply chain including a strong focus on the logistics of grain through transport, storage, and ports.

GTA has over 270 organisations as members ranging from regional family businesses to large national and international trading, storage and handling companies, grain marketers, consumers, and processors.

The vast majority of grain contracts executed in Australia refer to GTA grain trading standards, standard-form grain contracts and GTA Trade Rules. Most of Australia's grain storage and freight movements are made by GTA members. Key national and state producer representative groups are also GTA Members. A full list of GTA Members is attached to this Submission.

2.0 Concerns re possible new GI right

The Australian grain industry operates under a self-regulatory model that is outlined in the Australian Grain Industry Code of Practice (Code). The Code is a practical guide to industry participants to achieve the standards and expectations of domestic and export customer requirements. The Code and other supporting industry mechanisms have been developed to ensure Australian grain is traded both domestically and internationally to meet customer requirements. Changes to the GI right while potentially able to be supported by the existing systems will introduce additional complexity without creating any value for the customer.

2.1.1 Existing Classification Systems

Australia has well-established classification systems for all grain types, most being based on a combination of grain varietal characteristics combined with Trading Standards.

Varietal Classification: Varietal classification is performed on a national basis for the major grains to classify varieties to meet distinct quality attributes for processors and end users. For wheat this includes trial plots where a wheat variety test line and control variety are grown together over a minimum of three seasons for final classification. Varietal classification can include area zones based on agronomic differences across Australia.

GTA Trading Standards: Trading Standards describe the particular qualities and characteristics of particular grades of various grain commodities with reference to common characteristics (such as protein, moisture and screenings). The use of agreed or defined Standards facilitates contracting by giving parties to contracts common reference points on which to base negotiations.

GTA Trading Standards reflect a broad-based industry consensus in relation to quality and specifications. The GTA Standards may also be adopted as Receival Standards or Outturn Standards by Storage Providers. As outlined in the Code, section 2.7.1: "GTA grade standards will only be used where the final grain outturned meets all specifications of that standard including objective quality parameters, relevant Varietal Master Lists and varietal purity, and all rules associated with those grades are complied with..."

Aggregated Product: Grain is utilised as a feed and food ingredient. Grain produced in a specific location by a producer is assessed against the agreed Trading Standards prior to aggregation with grain from other producers within the appropriate grade segregation. Grain is rarely packaged or bagged but is sold as a bulk product and can be stored in large storages of up to 60,000 tonnes.

The grain supply chain has many aggregation points where grain is received and combined with other grain. These include:

- Farm storage;
- local commercial storage;
- intermediate storage including container packers;
- domestic consumer storage; and
- port terminal storage.

Grain sold into the export market can be sold based on the vendor choosing which region or port zone grain will be provided or a negotiated load point may be agreed as part of the sale, for example Brisbane port. Grain sold into the export market may be aggregated with grain from other origination countries at the dis-port or at the customer storage facility.

In the domestic market a buyer can choose whether to buy from an aggregation point or whether to buy directly from one or more producers within a specific geography if they see value in the grain produced.

Summary:

The Australian grain industry has established product classification systems and a supply chain that is based on the aggregation of product. Whilst generally supportive of Free Trade Agreements (FTA) where they add value, GTA is not supportive of any alteration to the GI right as a trade off during the negotiation of the EU FTA as any proposed change may possibly create unnecessary complexity without the creation of real value for the grain industry.

We would be pleased to arrange a meeting to discuss this issue further at your convenience.

Please do not hesitate to contact GTA at any stage.

Kind Regards,

Pat O'Shannassy
CEO – Grain Trade Australia
