Agree that 15 days is too long a period within a month for a seller to respond to a buyers call, concur as suggested week is more reasonable

A reasonable delivery notice period required under buyers call is probably influenced by the volume of the contract as well. I don't know if that introduces a greater than desired level of complexity to the Trade Rules. It is significantly more onerous for a supplier to arrange freight on a 2000T contract with 7 days' notice than it is a 500T contract.

I note that the Trade currently deals with this by contract parties specifying max # of Tonnes which can be called on within any specified period.
