Update from Department of Agriculture and Fisheries QLD

From 1am Tuesday 3 November 2020, the Queensland border zone has been removed.

New South Wales residents or visitors that have not been in a current COVID-19 hotspot in the last 14 days are able to travel anywhere in Queensland and stay for as many nights as they like. They must still complete an electronic border pass before travelling. There are 32 greater Sydney Local Government Areas listed as COVID-19 hotspots and all of Victoria is still considered a hotspot.

The class exemption that commenced on 22 August 2020 for farmers and agribusiness workers needing to move between Queensland and New South Wales hotspots to perform essential agribusiness services or farming activities has been extended until 11.59 pm on 31 December 2020.

To enter Queensland under a class exemption, you will need:

1. A copy of the Chief Health Officer's class exemption letter dated 13 October 2020 \(PDF, 162KB\)
2. Evidence of your identity, confirming your place of residence.
3. Evidence you are an agribusiness essential worker (e.g. letter of employment, business contract, evidence of property ownership or lease, evidence of agistment arrangements).

Farmers and agribusiness workers may also need to complete a written Border Declaration Pass at the border before entering Queensland.
